FEATURED SPEAKER AND HONORARY DEGREE RECIPIENT

Highly acclaimed as a forward-thinking leader in the hospitality industry, Dennis W. Quaintance H'18 is CEO and Chief Design Officer of Quaintance-Weaver Restaurants & Hotels – an impressive employee-owned family of upscale hotels and restaurants in the Triad, which include the Proximity Hotel, Print Works Bistro, the O.Henry Hotel, Green Valley Grill, and Lucky 32. Quaintance-Weaver has earned a stellar reputation for creating exemplary guest experiences while demonstrating a leading-edge commitment to best practices in sustainability. Dennis and his wife, Nancy, co-founder and Vice President of Hotels for Quaintance-Weaver, are active supporters of Guilford College.

STUDENT SPEAKER

Born and raised in St. Mary's County, Maryland, Judia Tyisha Holton '18 has committed their life to social justice and human rights. Judia uses art and personal narrative to combat systems of oppression and build community. They place emphasis on cultural activism, politics of respectability, gender and sexuality, and community-based research. Judia currently works for the public school system while working with organizers across the state of North Carolina and locally with Black Lives Matter - Gate City. They were a Community and Justice Studies major and look forward to a career in social justice after graduation.

ACADEMIC REGALIA

The custom of wearing caps, gowns and hoods at college functions dates to the Middle Ages. In 1895, a commission of American educational institutions met to craft a uniform code of academic regalia that is still in use today. As a Quaker-founded institution, Guilford recognizes that some individuals may choose not to wear regalia as a matter of personal conscience.

The style and color of cap, gown and hood indicate both the level of the wearer's education and his or her field of study. The bachelor's degree recipient wears an unadorned, straight gown with long, pointed sleeves. The master's degree recipient wears a similar robe with shorter, less full sleeves. The doctorate-level robe is most elaborate, with velvet panels adorning the gown's front and sleeves.

The hood's design is highly symbolic: The colors of its silk lining typically denote the institution granting the degree, its velvet border signifies the degree's field and the overall size indicates the level of degree (bachelor, master or doctor). The field of learning, rather than the department that governed the major work, determines the color of the velvet trim color on the hood. For instance, a master of arts wears a hood trimmed with a white border, irrespective of their major field.

If more than one degree is held, the gown and hood reflect the highest degree attained. The colors indicative of the various fields of learning are as follows:

Anthropology - Dark Blue	Engineering - Orange	Music - Pink
Arts - White	English - White	Philosophy - Dark Blue
Business Administration - Light Brown	Fine Arts - Brown	Physical Education - Sage Green
Communication - Crimson	Government - Peacock Blue	Political Science - Dark Blue
Counseling & Guidance - Light Blue	History - White	Psychology - Gold
Dramatic Arts - Brown	Humanities - White	Science - Gold
Economics - Copper	Literature - White	Sociology - White
Education - Light Blue	Library Science - Lemon	Theology - Scarlet
	Mathematics - Gold

COLLEGE MARSHAL

Richard L. Zweigenhaft, Charles A. Dana Professor of Psychology

STUDENT MARSHALS

Faculty select new student marshals during the spring semester from sophomores and first semester juniors with a 3.0 GPA who show dependability and responsibility to represent the student body at College functions. Burgundy and gray honor cords denote graduating marshals.

Undergraduate student marshals assisting with Commencement are wearing burgundy gowns.
